

Debriefing P1

1. What were the key points observed about the interview?

You mention several times about the experience of those who participate in the workshop as an important element for conducting the activities. You also mention about the importance of having a training for the participants, which helps in the application of the DT techniques.

2. What did you find to be most surprising about this interview?

The previous organization for conducting the workshop and, consequently, the selection of the DT techniques. He does a briefing, understanding what the client really wants, then he structures every workshop to know who will participate. In addition, he mentioned that he follows the same structure, with different techniques, with professional colleagues in other teams.

3. What did you see or hear that was pretty much what you expected (or like other sites you have seen)?

That he consults a lot with professionals experienced in the use of DT, that he considers such professionals as a source of knowledge.

4. What did you learn about the problem and "fixes" that you didn't know before? That you did?

That the experience of those who will participate can change the course of the activity. In scenarios where the participants already know each other, the decision of which techniques to use is easier.

5. What would you ask if you could go back? Would you ask the next participant this as well?

How does he select the participants he thinks is easier when they already know each other and the impact of this on the selection of techniques.

6. What worked really well?

The interaction between the participant and the interviewer.

7. What didn't work so well or what should be changed?

My initial presentation could be improved. Some moments the participant lost a little focus on the subject, which resulted in the interview running over its allotted / planned time.

8. Other comments?
